ed drama. "Tiger Rose" is withal thoroughly human and will be found a delight with all classes of theatergoers.
Others in the cast will be Bernard Mc-Owen, as a Royal Northwest Mounted police, Chas. Regal, as a factor of the Hudson Bay trading post; Jack Bertin, Frank Ryan, James H. Lewis, Ben Hewitt Libbey, J. Clayton Earl, Miss Emilie Lessing and Arthur J. Wood.
The production will be the original one second or No. 2 company, universal interest will surely attach to what promises to be one of this season's best theatrical offerings.

tremely popular with Phoenixians — especially the brand of vaudeville which the Ramona is putting out. Ten feature acts comprise each bill, and the program includes the entire category of vaudeville endeavor. Singers, dancers, comedians, monologists, and a bewildering chorus of brilliantly costumed femininity, all combine to make the present attraction at the Ramona the highest type of vaudeville that house has yet presented.
The feature picture to be screened in conjunction with the vaudeville performance is Charles Ray in "The Sheriff's Son" — a Paramount-Artcraft feature, in which Ray assumes a western characterization. Comedy and a selected scenic feature will also be shown in the picture line-up. The policy of the Ramona not to advance prices is still maintained, and regular house prices prevail. It will be the continued policy of the Ramona to feature matinee daily, and change the entire bill twice a week—Sundays and Wednesdays.

LAST CHANCE TODAY
MATINEE AND NIGHT
TO SEE "THE BRAT"

"The Brat," Maude Fulton's sensational drama, concludes its engagement at the Elks theater with the matinee today and the performance tonight.
The play, although it was produced here last season, has proven to be a great drawing card and nothing but words of praise are heard regarding Miss Alden in the role that was made famous by Miss Fulton on the speaking stage and by the great Nazimova on the screen.
It is an intensely interesting human play and is most creditably handled by the entire organization, for while the brat is the central figure, the story calls for important characters, all of which are in capable hands.
Unlike so many plays of the past year, or for the past five years, "The Brat" appeals directly to the better instinct of mankind, and if the method of the author was to use a unique creature for her quaint philosophy of life, it is all the more impressive for the reason that a "spade" is called a spade and the veneer and polish of so-called higher society is laid bare when the intent is deception.

From the very beginning of the story until the final word is spoken interest does not lag for a moment, but surprise piles upon surprise to a point where the onlooker feels he is indebted to the management which makes so captivating a stage story possible.
It should be borne in mind that today, Sunday, the final performances of "The Brat" will be given, and should make seat reservation accordingly.

planists to play ragtime. It's not in them. Well, it's the same way with jazz. You can't teach a person to play soulful jazz unless he has jazz in his soul. He may understand perfectly well what jazz is, may know how the effects are produced but the jazz tricks are not written into the music—they can't be—and if he hasn't a jazzy soul he won't be able to squeeze any jazz out of the instrument.
